

POLITICALS RULE.

Business Takes a Back Seat for the Animated Discussion of Candidates.

A Confident Feeling Among Real Estate Men That Business Will Soon Boom.

How Montana's Doubtful Political Standing has been the Source of Much Gratiatious Advertising.

Real estate men report that business is picking up as much as could be expected in this piping political period. Politics is the one subject of discussion everywhere. On the streets, on the trains, in the hotels, in the street cars, in the real estate offices, and in fact everywhere that people congregate, political gossip is exchanged. In view of this business is what may be called dull. Politics takes the place of everything else and will continue to do so until the polls close on October 1. Even the ladies talk politics and the street urchins assemble in groups and express their preferences.

It is not strange therefore that the business channels are neglected. It is hard to find the heart of the firm in his office. Any business man who is generally out on some little political matter, and the hired man would not open his mouth or say a thing relative to his employer's affairs without the latter's consent.

Such was the state of affairs the real estate reporter found during his rounds yesterday. There is a general good feeling, however, and as soon as the political crisis has passed a lively reaction of trade is anticipated. Never has there been so much inquiry from the east as at the present time. Men of means and others seeking new homes are writing daily to our different bureaus of information—the board of trade and real estate firms—all expressing their willingness to come and grow up with the new state.

This is readily accounted for. In the effort east Montana is the center of attraction as to how it stands in politics. It is regarded as a close and doubtful state, and in connection with this, correspondents and representatives of eastern cities have sent columns of readable matter relative to Montana and her vast resources to their papers. Montana's political standing has been the means of giving her more favorable advertising than any other state, but failed through any other source. And it has been advertising of a good substantial quality, prepared by the best of the issue of the New York Daily Graphic contained a three-column write-up of our prominent business men and a two-page illustration of a number of Helena's buildings; also an ancient birdseye view of the city, which makes Helena appear like an old Spanish town.

It is through this extensive advertising in popular state that great attention has been directed this way and the good results of it are already noticeable in the increasing number of inquiries for property dealt in.

The Hotel Park addition is becoming a popular site for investors and no less than $10,000 has been invested in lots there since it was placed on the market two weeks ago. It joins the Hotel Broadwater grounds, which is destined to be the residence suburb of Montana's capital.

Last Night's Fire.

Smoke was noticed issuing from the cellar of McCaffery's building on Lyndale avenue last night and an alarm was sent in from box 62 at the Welcome building. The department responded promptly and in a short time the blaze was extinguished. A brisk sale was blowing and had the fire reached the upper floor and the entire building must have been destroyed.

How it started is a mystery. The building is occupied on the first floor by a meat and grocery market conducted by Henry Oplander. On the second floor Mr. McCaffery and Michael Wall live and both were in bed when the fire was discovered by Wall about 11 o'clock, when he smelled the smoke. Furniture was removed from the upper floor but nothing was molested below. The damage is light. The building is insured for $5,000, but there is no insurance on the store. The loss will not exceed $100.

About a year ago the same building was partially destroyed by fire.

Perrin's Photography.

As the years roll on the old story methods of early days in the commercial, mechanical, scientific and mining world are giving way to the genius of modern times. This is true also of the improved and perfected method of shorthand known as the Perin system which is growing into popularity. Englehorn's Helena Business College introduced this system in its curriculum recently and many people are taking the course with great success. It is the simplest method extant and can be acquired by anyone of ordinary ability in six weeks time, by following the instructions of the teachers. Fred Wesley E. Walker, of Detroit, Mich., has been engaged instructor. This shorthand system may be learned through the mail as well as at the school. Twenty-six students are now learning it, thirteen of whom are mail scholars in the adjacent territories. For $25 the college guarantees to successfully instruct pupils. Write the Englehorn's Helena Business College for a pamphlet and further information.

Decorated chamber sets in new patterns only $3.50 at The Bee Hive.

On the Montana Circuit.

The sales of auction pools on the Montana circuit this season was not quite up to the total of last year. This is accounted for from the fact that the California "plungers" did not put in appearance as numerous as they did then. Nevertheless the total was large and is as follows:

Anaconda $187,417
Butte 25,528
Missoula 45,000
Deer Lodge $852,117

Over half a millions dollars changing hands on the Montana circuit is quite an item and will undoubtedly open the eyes of many people. Of the grand total the racing associations deducted 5 per cent, or $22,655.53.
